

THE STUDIO PROJECTS C1 HELPS RJ KANEAO CONVEY THE ALOHA SPIRIT

Waikoloa Village, Hawaii

April 20, 2012- RJ Kaneao is busy in paradise. The multifaceted Kaneao enjoys working where he is adjacent to a thriving music scene. With its influx of tourists,

Hawaii is a venue which offers a stage to many live acts who perform traditional Polynesian and island music. An aspect of having so many talented musicians in one place is that each individual needs to find their own niche. RJ's professional repertoire covers many niches. He plays guitar and performs with a traditional Polynesian band, writes and fronts for his own reggae band, and still finds time to track in his home studio-The Groove Plant Hawaii.

He has worked with so many classic talents like the late Don Ho and the late IZ, and performed with Ziggy Marley and the band Positive Motion. He also produces and records a few local acts as well. "I am currently focused on recording my backup band's album, Vertical Myst. They are up and coming artists. I put a lot of effort in working with them in the studio, producing polished tunes to help them gain notoriety. I owe them because when we play live, they make me sound better!" While in the studio, he relies on his Studio Projects C1 his go-to mic in most situations. "This is my favorite vocal mic, and I use it in a so many situations, it's just awesome. I'd like to note that I have many studio mics but no matter what application I'm always turning to the C1..."

RJ attended Musicians Institute in Los Angeles with a focus on vocals & keyboards which honed his musical talent before moving back to Hawaii. RJ's track Marry You is creeping up the island charts, and he is looking forward to touring in the near future with upcoming dates to be announced in California, Oregon, London, Tahiti and New Zealand.
